Wilmington, Tewksbury, Billerica and State Police Units involved

Manhunt finally ends — after 17 hours — on Wednesday morning Suspect facing multiple charges

TEWKSBURY/WILMINGTON — A search that started Tuesday evening ended on Wednesday morning when a Tewksbury Police Officer apprehended a suspect, who had stolen a car and rammed a stationary police cruiser in Wilmington before ditching out in Tewksbury overnight.

The suspect, Xavier A. Mejia, 24, of Boston, was caught on Carlton Road in Tewksbury right after 10:00 am Wednesday morning by a Tewksbury Officer with assistance from both Wilmington and Billerica Units, as well as the State Police.

Mejia is facing charges including Receiving Stolen Motor Vehicle, Assault and Battery on a Police Officer, Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon, Resisting Arrest and Failure to Stop for Police.

The bizarre chase began on Tuesday evening, when Mejia allegedly stole a car in Boston and crashed into a police vehicle in Wilmington. Mejia then led police officers from several towns, K-9 units, and even a state police helicopter on a long chase through the woods and backroads of Tewksbury. The suspect was briefly spotted by Tewksbury police near South and Main Streets, but he fled back into a wooded area before he could be apprehended.

The car used in the initial crash had been reported stolen from Boston earlier that today.

The search began sometime before 5:30 p.m., and continued until at least 9:30 p.m.. An officer spotted the suspect

Cornhole fundraiser to benefit boy with rare genetic syndrome

WILMINGTON — Eight-year-old Jace Murphy faces his physical challenges with a smile. His grandmother Judi Curcio and several residents of Wilmington want to keep it that way.

They've organized the Jace Murphy Cornhole Tournament, which will be held from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Aug. 28 at the Wilmington Farmers Market on the town green.

The proceeds will help pay for ongoing procedures and medical treatments for this active boy who was born with Treacher Collins Syndrome, a rare genetic disorder known as characterized by a small jaw, drooping eyes, and underdeveloped cheekbones. The syndrome is thought to be the result of either inherited or mutated genes, affecting one in 50,000 people.

Of all the medical challenges Jace faces daily, the most important of them is keeping his airway open and clear.

"As a young active boy we need to be sure his tracheostomy tube is secure at all times," said Kristen Murphy, Jace's mother. "Jace has had multiple surgeries starting at day three of life, beginning with a tracheostomy placement to allow him to breathe, followed by a fundoplication and feeding tube. He then had a full palate repair, multiple dental rehabilitations, and a bone anchored hearing aid (BAHA) implant."

But that's just the beginning for Jace, Murphy continued. "He is going to undergo many more dental surgeries, another palate

Wilmington resident Marjorie Taylor Local nurse implicated for 35 counts of false prescriptions

By BRENDAN FOLEY

WOBURN — As state and local agencies continue to grapple with the plague of opiod addiction running rampant through the state, a Wilmington nurse has been implicated for obtaining thousands of painkillers through phony prescriptions.

Marjorie Taylor, 29, has been charged with 35 counts of false prescriptions. She was arraigned last Thursday and released on personal recognizance until her hearing on September 2.

In a statement announcing the arraignment, Middlesex District Attorney Marian Ryan said, "The defendant allegedly created a complex scheme through which she used multiple pharmacies and prescriptions made out to multiple relatives to conceal her own procurement of these powerful substances."

"These things are monitored," explained Wilmington Police Lieutenant Brian Pupa. "There's a prescription monitoring program."

Local police forces were first contacted by the DEA about the possibility of prescription fraud, which eventually led to the arrest of Taylor.

Strangely, Taylor's alleged crimes were not committed through her connections as a nurse. Taylor allegedly obtained an authentic prescription pad while being seen as a patient. Over a four-month period, Taylor is alleged to have fill out prescriptions for a staggering number of medications.

Along with Percocet, Taylor is alleged to have written prescriptions for hydrocodone, hydromorphone and tramadol, orders that were fulfilled in pharmacies throughout the region, including both Wilmington and Tewksbury.

The epidemic of prescription-drug and opiod use has spread through Massachusetts, with local schools now stocking NARCAN as a means to revive sufferers of drug overdoses.

According to data compiled by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH), 2015 saw 1531 people die of overdose from heroin, opiod-based painkillers, and other unspecified opiods. For comparison, in 2012 only 698 people died from overdoses.

Eight of those deaths in 2015 were in Wilmington. In 2012, there were only two.

And those numbers are not going down. The DPH reports that as of the first six months of 2016, there have been 488 deaths attributable to opiod overdose, higher than the first six months of 2015.

Pupa confirmed to the Crier that the Wilmington Police Department is happy to work with anyone who approaches them reporting a problem with prescription drugs, but due to the nature of how these items are obtained, it is difficult to track what products are in circulation and what rates people are using them at.

"We definitely work with the community in regards to substance abuse problems," Pupa said. "We definitely will try to connect people with the proper resources."

Over 15,000 raised to support local veterans

Fifth annual Ryan Memorial Wiffle Ball event hits a home run once again

By BRENDAN FOLEY

brendanmfoley@outlook.com

TEWKSBURY — The fifth annual Tim Ryan Wiffle Ball Extravaganza proved to be the charitable event's most successful year yet, raking in $15,000 to support local veterans.

The fundraising event was created in memory and tribute to LCPL Tim Ryan, a Wilmington native that went overseas with the armed forces as a teenager. Ryan returned after two tours. Shortly after his return to civilian life, Ryan succumbed to symptoms of PTSD and took his own life.

Now, friends and family gather every year to throw the wiffle ball tournament, with one hundred percent of all funds donated to support veterans in the area.

The event was hosted at the Wilmington/Tewksbury

Elks Lodge on Saturday, running the full length of the day. The grounds were packed with events and activities, with everything from a dunk tank to a moon bounce and inflatable jungle gym, to face-painting stations and cornhole tables.

Over 60 raffles were held over the course of the day, including autographed sports memorabilia. Steady streams of smoke from the multiple running grills carried the aroma of good food across the grounds.

On the baseball field, five wiffleball stations were set up so ten teams of three could play simultaneously.

This year's winning team comprised of Tony Deshler, Joe MacDonald, and Eric Rosenberg. The champs are not even from the local area, they were simply a group of wiffle ball fans that heard about the event and loved the idea of supporting the cause.

Jesse Cammarata, one of the event organizers, expressed heartfelt thanks to everyone who came out to join in or help facilitate the event, but he saved special praise for the dozens of t-shirt sponsors that helped support the tournament. Thanks to these sponsors, including a large donation by Bright Planet Solar, even if the tournament had been rained out the group will still have been able to make a sizable donation.

"I really want to stress how important the t-shirt sponsors were," Cammarata said. "They all pay to be on the back of a t-shirt, and that means we get to donate money no matter what. If it weren't for them, we wouldn't be able to do half of what we do."

Over five years, the group has now raised $45,000 for veterans' benefits.

Participants in the tournament ranged from local faces who knew Ryan and his family, to strangers who were simply drawn by the cause and the festive atmosphere.

"I'm a veteran myself," said Charleston resident Jamie Chambers. "It's a great cause and a great event. I have two brothers that are veterans and they also have PTSD. Anything I can do to help the cause, I even brought up an autographed Bruins' stick."

Chambers runs veterans' benefits himself, and he is always deeply moved by the way communities rise up to support soldiers who are grappling with post-war life.

"It's great," he said. "I wish there were even more events like this, just so our younger generations can know what these guys sacrificed and gave back to their country."

"Tim was a close friend of my brother-in-law," said Heidi Chase. "I think there's more people every year and get more donations every year. I think it's just a good cause and it hits home for a lot of people."

"Tim was a very close family friend," said Shauna Higgins. "To see so many people come out here is just amazing."

Moving forward, Cammarata and the other organizers hope to keep finding new activities for the tournament day, encouraging people to stay for even longer. After five years, the Extravaganza has only continued to grow and inspire more and more people to come out in support of those heroes who still need help.

It's Your Money
by Todd Brisbois

BORROW FROM YOUR 401(K)?

Ideally, the money you've set aside for retirement in your 401(k) should stay there, growing year by year to insure a more comfortable future. But if you really need to borrow, it's sometimes tempting to borrow what feels like your own money.

The plus side of borrowing from your 401(k) is that it IS your own money, and you'll pay interest back into your own account instead of to a lender (be aware that rates are up, too).

The downside: If you leave your job, you generally have to pay back the loan within 30 to 60 days or owe taxes on the balance PLUS a 10-percent penalty. AND the interest you pay yourself may not add up to what you could have earned on that money if it had stayed in your 401(k) account. Worse yet, many borrowers reduce or stop contributions until the loan is repaid, losing the earnings on their contributions AND the employer's match.

TOWN CRIER STAFF

WILMINGTON - Lake Street in Wilmington was closed Tuesday night after what police are calling a serious motor vehicle crash.

The crash happened around 10 p.m. on Tuesday night between Route 129 and Grove Ave.

The crash only involved one vehicle, which appeared to have crashed into a utility pole head on going approximately 50-60 miles per hour.

Lake St. was closed from Rt. 129 to Grove Ave. due to the serious motor vehicle crash.

On Wednesday morning, the Wilmington Police Department issued the following statement on the accident: "On Tuesday evening, August 23 2016, at approximately 10:00 p.m. the Wilmington Police Department responded to a single vehicle crash at the intersection of Lake Street and Jaques Lane. Upon arrival officers found a 2012 Honda CRV with heavy all around damage. Both occupants of the vehicle appeared to have sustained serious injuries.

"The operator, a 40-year-old male from Wilmington, was transported to Lahey Clinic. The passenger, a 37-year-old male from Tewksbury, was transported to Mass General Hospital via MedFlight. Preliminary witness reports indicate excessive speed may have been a factor.

"The crash is currently under investigation with the assistance of the Massachusetts State Police Collision Analysis and Reconstruction Section."

According to reports, one of the male victims had a significant laceration to his head and face.

Patrick Keogan officially indicted

BOSTON — The Wilmington man charged with threatening to commit arson against area mosques has officially been indicted.

Patrick Keogan, 44, was most recently ordered to be held without bail following a hearing with U.S. District Court Magistrate Judge Jennifer C. Boal.

Keogan was arrested for allegedly going onto the Facebook page of the Islamic Society of Boston Cultural Center's Facebook page and posted an image of a burning mosque. Superimposed over the image were the words, "Burn your local mosque."

Authorities claim that there are posts displaying a predilection towards violence against Muslim going back years.

Keogan is also accused of violating an official ban from possessing firearms and ammunitions. Once again, Facebook proved to be Keogan's undoing, as authorities claim to have found multiple posts by Keogan linking him to a gun store in New Hampshire where Keogan allegedly bought ammunition.

The U.S. Department of Justice has officially charged Keogan with making a threat over Facebook to injure or intimidate another individual or to unlawfully damage or destroy a building by means of fire, as well as one count of possessing ammunition as a convicted felon.

In a press release, the Department of Justice stated, "The charging statutes each provide a sentence of no greater than ten years in prison, three years of supervised release and a fine of $250,000."

Wilmington woman trapped inside of a Methuen dialysis center for hours

By BRENDAN FOLEY

brendanmfoley@outlook.com

METHUEN — An 86-year-old Wilmington woman was trapped inside a Methuen dialysis center for hours after the building was locked up with her still inside.

Maureen Perry has been receiving biweekly dialysis treatment, but this was her first visit to the Fresenius Dialysis Center. Perry had just moved into a retirement home in Wilmington.

Perry's absence was noticed, and officials apparently spent hours trying to figure out where she had gone. She hadn't gone anywhere, and was instead locked inside the dialysis center with no way to exit.

Perry, a former school nurse and resident of Chelmsford, was located by her family. They only knew to check the dialysis center because they had visited Perry earlier in the day. Because it was after hours, the family could not contact any employees of the facility to open the doors and had to resort to emergency services.

While waiting, Perry's granddaughter snapped a powerful photograph through the window of a trapped, forlorn Perry lying in bed.

Methuen firefighters and police officers arrived on the scene and freed Perry via the lock box.

"We deeply regret what occurred and have spoken with the patient's family," said Fresenius spokesman Jon Stone in a statement. "Our patients' care and safety are our top priorities and we have initiated additional processes and safeguards to ensure that an incident such as this does not happen again."

Perry's family remains livid about the incident. Jeff Crosby, the husband of Maureen's granddaughter Erica Crosby, described the scene when Maureen was helped out by the Methuen paramedics.

"When the ambulance service came back to pick her up, the place was closed, locked up, lights off," Jeff Crosby said to the Lowell Sun before adding later on, "We're waiting on the results from the investigation from the dialysis center and the Department of Public Health."

Erica Crosby is a nurse herself and has expressed disbelief as to how such an oversight could have been committed.

The Department of Public Health has announced that they are launching a "thorough investigation" into the incident, per a statement from Director Communications, Scott Zoback.

Thief who stole Patriots helmet believed to be from Wilmington

By BRENDAN FOLEY

FOXBOROUGH — In a strange twist to the dine-and-dash heard across the country, the thief captured on security camera stealing an autographed Patriots' football helmet from a Foxborough restaurant has contacted the restaurant and offered to return the stolen item.

While other fans were attending the Patriots game that August 11, one customer lingered behind at the bar of Skipjack's Restaurant. When left alone, the young man hopped the bar, grabbed the autographed helmet, and then climbed back over. Security cameras caught the entire theft, as well as the young man then taking off his Tom Brady jersey and using it to wrap up the helmet.

He left without paying the bill.

Because the culprit was carded before being served his drinks, investigating officers know him to be a Wilmington resident with a July 1986 birthdate. His full identity remains unknown.

The bizarre story took an even more bizarre turn when the still-unidentified thief called the manager of the Skipjack's Restaurant and apologized for the theft. The thief allegedly informed the manager that he regretted the act and was planning to "FedEx" the helmet back to the restaurant.

In the ten days since that call was placed, the restaurant has not yet received their stolen helmet back.

Fun local places to go before the summer comes to an end

By MORGAN HAKALA
News Correspondent

Summer may be coming to a close, but that doesn't mean the nice weather is ending yet. So, there is still time to get out of the house and town to do some fun day activities both kid-friendly and not.

Kimball Farm in Westford, is the perfect place for people of all ages to go. Opened 75 years ago as an ice cream stand, Kimball's has grown immensely over the years. You can go to Kimball's and have some of the best homemade ice cream in the area. But, Kimball's offers so much more than just delicious ice cream.

There's the country store where you can purchase items such as handmade jewelry and clothing and home décor. You can also buy coffee and pastries if the ice cream hasn't filled you already.

If you want something heartier to eat, try Kimball's seafood and grill for some tasty meals. Kimball's is also well-known for its mini golf. You can choose from two different 18-hole courses that will be sure to entertain and challenge everyone. That's not all that Kimball's has to do, though! Take a spin on the bumper boats or the brand new bumper cars, also known as Spin Zone. These are state of the art bumper cars because they are electronically controlled and will randomly spin you around at times for added excitement.

Looking for more golf options? Try the driving range or the pitch and putt. If baseball is more your style, Kimball's also has batting cages for all the hitting fun you can imagine. You also have the chance to see and interact with animals. There's Animal Adventures with a variety of exotic animals for you to observe. There are also pony rides for the horse lovers.

Looking for more fun and games? Head over to the Olde Sawmill Arcade and try your hand at over 100 different games. New this year to Kimball's is the Soaring Eagle Zip Line. Have a seat and get pulled backwards up 100 feet, and then soar back down to the ground. Kimball's has a multitude of things to do that everyone will be sure to enjoy.

Around a half hour away from Tewksbury, in the town of Bolton, you will find the Nashoba Valley Winery. The winery is in a beautiful location surrounded by hills and apple orchards. The winery produces over 40 types of wine. Besides apple picking during the fall, all throughout the year the winery is open to purchase wines as well as to taste them and to take a tour of the winery itself.

I recently did the winery tour with my dad. The tour showed all the stages the wine goes through until it goes into the bottle you purchase. It also included samples of different types of wine that the winery sells. The tour is about 45 minutes long. It's very interesting to see how the wine is made, and the samples make it even better.

If you're 21 years old or older, love to drink wine, and are looking for something fun to do, the winery is definitely a place you need to check out sometime soon.

which is being promoted by special interests who are opposed to expanding access to charter schools.

Save Our Public Schools - a special interest-backed coalition which opposes families' right to choose the best public school for their children - makes the following claim in a new advertisement: "$400 million dollars - that's how much charter schools will drain from Massachusetts public schools this year."

This is a deliberately misleading attack on public charter schools, designed to scare voters away from supporting equal opportunity for thousands of families desperate for a better education. Here's the truth about public charter schools and school funding:

Charter Schools ARE public schools. According to Massachusetts state law, a charter school is a "public school operated under a charter granted by the Board... a charter school is considered a local education agency for all purposes." In Massachusetts, education funding is assigned to a student, not to a school. So when a student opts for a public charter school, the money to educate that student simply follows her from one public school to another, exactly how it would if she moved from one district school to another. According to Scot Lehigh of The Boston Globe, implying that charter schools are not public schools, because they're overseen by the state, is "akin to saying that the state police aren't public law enforcement officers."

Public charter schools have actually INCREASED funding for public education. Whenever a new public charter school opens, the state provides traditional public school districts with more state aid, which has increased overall education spending on public education by hundreds of millions of dollars. Opening new public charter schools has led to more than $236 million in state aid for public education over the last five years, including more than $41 million in FY15.

Spending on public education in Massachusetts has increased dramatically, not decreased.

Over the last five years, due in part to the spending outlined above, education spending has increased in Massachusetts by 16.9 percent. This has amounted to an additional $1.7 billion in public funding for public schools.

Trying to find answers to Alzheimer's disease and dementia

This article has been written by Stephen S. Bowman, who is the President of Peregrine Senior Living the parent company of Peregrine's Landing at Tewksbury - a memory care community. He can be reached at Sbowman@Peregrine-companies.com.

It is amazing to me that Alzheimer's disease has not only confounded our medical and scientific ambitions, but also our humane and compassionate models of care. What an existential mess for you and me, and of course Mom.

Almost unheard of 100 years ago, and spoken of only in secret ten years ago, today it is a silent epidemic. We all know the grim reaper of time and memory is coming, and we Baby Boomers wait in passive resignation. Now Mom, soon me.

This is like AIDS in 1984 except much worse in terms of numbers. Five million this year, seven million in 2020. So despite the fact that we live in a world of crises: global terror, global warming, and over population, we are also a generation, quite literally that is losing our minds.

At this moment, if your loved one is diagnosed with dementia, which as a practicality matter means the decimation of short term memory; the overwhelming desire is to stop the disease process and preserve the short term memory of the person you love. This makes sense. I don't want to lose my wife. So we feast on drugs that purport to fend off the loss of short term memory: Aricept, Exelon, and even jellyfish supplements. And our models of care tell us that computer games such as Lumosity and Sudoku will also help keep my wife near me if she works hard enough.

But the facts are less comforting, and in fact quite stubborn. According to Consumer Reports, dementia medications intended to delay the loss of short term memory have little more effect than a placebo. And in a landmark study completed by St Michael Hospital of Canada in 2013 by the Li Ka Shing Knowledge Institute, which focused on early stages of the dementia onslaught tells us that "cognitive enhancers for dementia, don't work".

So for those families stricken by this disease, the question is; what should be the goal of "dementia care" if the pharmacological hopes for short term memory drugs are fool's gold? How should we be caring for our loved ones stricken by this disease? In a selfish way, how do we want to be cared for since half of the people reading this essay will be directly affected in a few short years?

For the vast majority of our society and medical community, we are not even asking those questions. Like Godot, we remain paralyzed by the hope of a cure. In our denial of self-evident facts as we see no improvement from the drug regimen, we continue to trap our loved one's in the Sisyphean task of playing memory care saving computer games and producing a world of frustration without end. This is absurd.

If we know that death is the end game of the disease, and that short term memory is being ravaged, and that we want our loved ones to be given comfort and gentle stimulation, should we not look to their long term memories?

All of us have passions in our long term memories that continue to give bliss, and stir our souls. Religion is a great example of this reality. I like to tease that I was a raging atheist in my 20's, but an altar boy when I was 12. That reverence will never leave me. Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto also comes to mind. Some of us have wondered at the stars for a life time and that astonishment does not simply cease with a diagnosis.

If we read any of the many autobiographies from people with the disease, this is obvious in the way they think and reflect. These touchstones are imbedded in each of us.

Rather than discussing current events, we should be discussing marriage, sports, religion, and music. Subjects that gave us comfort in our pasts, which remain our guiding constellations as we march forward in our lives regardless of the disease. As a care model, we Baby Boomers should stress less the desire to save short term memory, and embrace the things that give our loved ones real joy, and that will be in their past. And that is how we will want to be cared for.

We need to embrace this curiously counter intuitive approach. And if we have doubts, consult with any experienced caregiver about what is obvious to them. Speaking for my 57-year-old self, I am fairly certain that as I age, I will find more joy in a Beate record, a Mass, or photo of my mother, than in all the hours of CNN and social media available in the world.

stitutions, editorial boards, and opinion leaders across the Commonwealth have rejected the idea that public charter schools take money from public education, calling Save Our Public Schools' argument everything from "absurd" to "an outright lie."

Letters to the editor

Please Vote 'Yes' on Question 2

Dear Editor:

On Nov. 8, voters will go to the polls and, along with voting for our next President, have an opportunity to weigh in on a number of local issues - including Question 2 which, if approved, would lift the cap on public charters. Nearly 32,000 families are stuck on a waiting list to attend one of these great public schools because of an outdated and arbitrary cap on the number of charter schools in MA. (See attached flyer with more general info.)

As we get closer to election day, we wanted to make sure you had the facts around charter schools, and to clear up some misinformation

How do I know if my children qualify as homeless, migrant or runaway?
Do the members of your household lack a permanent address? Are you staying together in a shelter, hotel, or other temporary housing arrangement? Does your family relocate on a seasonal basis? Are any children living with you who have chosen to leave their prior family or household? If you believe children in your household meet these descriptions and haven't been told your children will get free meals, please call or e-mail Paul Ruggiero, 978-694-6000 or paul.ruggiero@wpsk12.com

3. Do I need to fill out an application for each child?

No. Use one Free and Reduced Price School Meals Application for all students in your household. We cannot approve an application that is not complete, so be sure to fill out all required information. Return the completed application to: your child's school.

Should I fill out an application if I received a letter this school year saying my children are already approved for free meals?

No, but please read the letter you got carefully and follow the instructions.

If any children in your household were missing from your eligibility notification, contact: Mary Palen, 159 Church Street Wilmington, MA 01887, 978-694-6064, mary.palen@wpsk12.com immediately.

Can I apply online?

Unfortunately not at this time.

My child's application was approved last year. Do I need to fill out a new one?

Yes. Your child's application is only good for that school year and for the first few days of this school year.

You must send in a new application unless the school told you that your child is eligible for the new school year.

I get WIC. Can my children get free meals?

Children in households participating in WIC may be eligible for free or reduced price meals. Please send in an application.

Will the information I give be checked?

Yes. We may also ask you to send written proof of the household income you report.

If I don't qualify now, may I apply later?

Yes, you may apply at any time during the school year.

For example, children with a parent or guardian who becomes unemployed may become eligible for free and reduced price meals if the household income drops below the income limit.

What if I disagree with the school's decision about my application?

You should talk to school officials. You also may ask for a hearing by calling or writing to: Ms. Mary DeLai, Superintendent of Schools, 161 Church St. Wilmington, MA 01887, 978-694-6000, mary.delai

@wpsk12.com

May I apply if someone in my household is not a U.S. citizen?

Yes. You, your children, or other household members do not have to be U.S. citizens to apply for free or reduced price meals.

What if my income is not always the same?

List the amount that you normally receive. For example, if you normally make $1000 each month, but you missed some work last month and only made $900, put down that you made $1000 per month.

If you normally get overtime, include it, but do not include it if you only work overtime sometimes.

If you have lost a job or had your hours or wages reduced, use your current income.

What if some household members have no income to report?

Household members may not receive some types of income we ask you to report on the application, or may not receive income at all. Whenever this happens, please write a 0 in the field.

However, if any income fields are left empty or blank, those will also be counted as zeroes.

Please be careful when leaving income fields blank, as we will assume you meant to do so.

We are in the military. Do we report our income differently?

Your basic pay and cash bonuses must be reported as income. If you get any cash value allowances for off-base housing, food, or clothing, or receive Family Subsistence Supplemental Allowance payments, it must also be included as income.

However, if your housing is part of the Military Housing Privatization Initiative, do not include your housing allowance as income. Any additional combat pay resulting from deployment is also excluded from income.

What if there isn't enough space on the application for my family?

List any additional household members on a separate piece of paper, and attach it to your application. Contact: Mary Palen, 159 Church Street Wilmington, MA 01887, 978-694-6064, mary.palen@wpsk12.com to receive a second application.

My family needs more help. Are there other programs we might apply for?

To find out how to apply for MA SNAP or other assistance benefits, contact your local assistance office or call the MA SNAP Hotline at 1-866-950-3663.

If you have other questions or need help, call Contact Mary Palen, Administrator of Food Services, 978-694-6064, mary.palen@wpsk12.com.

IRS warns of back-to-school scams; encourages students, parents, and schools to stay alert

Telephone scammers may target students and parents during the back-to-school season, and demand payments for such non-existent taxes as the "Federal Student Tax" the IRS has warned.

People should be on the lookout for IRS impersonators calling students and demanding that they wire money immediately to pay a fake "Federal Student Tax."

As in other similar scams, if the person doesn't comply, the scammer becomes aggressive and threatens to report the student to the police to be arrested.

As schools prepare to reopen, it's important for taxpayers to be particularly aware of this scheme going after students and parents. "Although variations of the IRS impersonation scam continue year-round, they tend to peak when scammers find prime opportunities to strike," says IRS Commissioner John Koskinen. "As students and parents enter the new school year, they should be alert to bogus calls, including those demanding fake tax payments from students."

The IRS encourages college and school communities to share this information so that students, parents, and their families are aware of these scams.

This year, the IRS has seen scammers use a variety of schemes to fool taxpayers into paying money or giving up personal information, including altering the caller ID on incoming phone calls to make it seem like the IRS, the local police, or another agency is calling; demanding fake payments using iTunes gift cards; "verifying" tax return information over the phone; soliciting W-2 information from payroll and human resource departments; and pretending to be from the tax preparation industry.

The agency adds that the best responses to a suspicious phone call are to give out no information and hang up immediately, and search the web for the telephone numbers scammers leave in their voicemails asking you to call back, as some of these numbers may be published online and linked to criminal activity.

Calls can also be reported to the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration online at: www.treasury.gov/tigta/contact_report_scam.shtml or by phone: 800-366-4484, and to the Federal Trade Commission Complaint Assistant www.ftccomplaintassistant.gov/#&panell1.

Ice Bucket Challenge, Saturday

August is designated "Ice Bucket Challenge Month" until a cure for A.L.S. is found. Last year's enormous success was terrific, but further monies are needed for continuing the research into curing this hideous disease. Towards that end, the Wilmington Rotary Club will be holding a Community wide Ice Bucket Challenge on Saturday, August 27 at 10:00 am.

The Challenge will be held, rain or shine, at Rotary Park and everyone is welcome to come and join with Rotarians with this Challenge.

Perhaps you did the Challenge last year or perhaps this would be your first time. Please plan on joining us either as a participant, or spectator. People of all ages will be able to join in the fun. We will have plenty of buckets, ice and water. If you have a favorite bucket, please bring it. As this is a fund raising event for A.L.S. research, we ask that you bring a donation of any amount with you on August 27th.

If you are unable to join us but wish to help find a cure, donations can be mailed to Wilmington Rotary Club, PO Box 503, Wilmington, Ma. 01887. A minor addition this year, if your company would donate $200 or more, we will display your banner or sign during the event. Corporate donations may be mailed to that address or call 978-658-2038.

The Wilmington Rotary Club is hereby challenging everyone to join us on August 27th.

Massachusetts had the most school bomb threats in the country last year

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One day this past April, schools in more than a dozen cities and towns in Massachusetts received bomb threats, triggering evacuations, searches by the bomb squad and the assignment of extra police officers. Three days later, 32 schools received bomb threats, prompting a similar response.

On both days, school was interrupted for students, and police, fire and other public safety officials had to shell out personnel and other resources to respond to the hoaxes.

Officials across the country say school threats, including but not limited to bomb threats, are increasing. One estimate is that during the last school year there were about eight bomb threats per school day. And that estimate doesn't include other threats of violence or disruption.

Massachusetts had 135 bomb threats in the 2015-16 school year, the most in the country, according to a tally based on media reports by the Educator's School Safety Network.

Sgt. William Qualls, commander of the state police bomb squad, said he believes the number was even higher.

"They are extremely frustrating, especially when a school gets multiple threats over a short period of time. Not only are you dealing with students and first responders, but also the parents. The entire community is affected," Qualls said.

Two years ago, public safety officials began training school administrators to do threat assessments to determine how they should respond. Depending on the type of threat and whether it has been called in to multiple schools, officials decide whether to evacuate and call in the bomb squad or to shelter in place and do a more limited search.

"We take each threat very seriously until we have reason to believe that it's not a serious threat," said Jennifer Mieth, a spokeswoman for the state's Department of Fire Services.

Many of the threats during the 2015-2016 year were made to multiple schools through robocalls, including the two threats in April.

District Attorney Ryan, Lahey Health and Winchester Hospital to host back-to-school safety day

Middlesex District Attorney Marian Ryan in partnership with Lahey Health and Winchester Hospital will host a free back-to-school safety day to remind parents and kids of important safety tips as they start the school year.

Visitors will be able to visit information booths hosted by the District Attorney's Office and community partners to receive resources on bullying, cyber-safety, bike safety and more as they prepare for back-to-school.

Visitors will also be able to explore over 40 emergency vehicles from public and private partners across the state including S.W.A.T. Trucks, Military Humvees, Mobile Command Centers, Motorcycles, Fire Trucks and much more. Additionally, the first 100 visitors to the teddy bear clinic will receive a free teddy bear.

In my opinion if Entourage Livery of North Attleboro is not shut down from FMCSA [US Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration] as an imminent hazard then I feel there statement made in the past that there concerned about public safety and are cleaning up the road ways of companies as such is a bogus statement.

They shut down a 30 year business back a few years ago with no history of any accidents and crippled them, to leave companies like Entourage on the roads, they had a safety audit back in 2013 and looking at there SMS records on the FMCSA web site they performed the a audit but never inspected any of there vehicles.... ??? I feel that was odd. Well any ways follow the story it's a good one.

Baxter State Park is “for those who love nature”

By PAIGE IMPINK
News Correspondent

paige@yourtowncrier.com

MILLINOCKET, ME — The northern terminus of the Appalachian Trail lies in Baxter State Park, Maine on Mount Katahdin, the 5,268 foot peak of this majestic state park.

Set deep in the center of the state, the trek there is not trivial. The packed dirt “Golden Road” is the only access point from the west for those in the Moosehead Lake region, while local road 157 and Route 11 is the path from the east and south. If your journeys take you up to Maine, consider visiting Baxter.

The mountains provide hikes of varying length and difficulties ranging from well worn, pine needle-covered paths to vertical climbs and boulder scrambles. Hikers are requested to sign in and have a flashlight with them when checking in to pay the day use fee at the gate.

Visitors sometimes get into a hike that takes longer than expected, and the deeply wooded base areas, while marked with blazes, create a shaded cover that can get dark with the fading sun of the day.

A series of ten camping areas dot the park and are highly sought after despite a lack of electricity or indoor plumbing. The park describes them as “rustic.” Those seeking a true wilderness experience will revel in the chance to stay at former fishing camps, set lakeside in the park.

Several freshwater beaches and pull outs provide visitors opportunities to cool off on a hot summer day, or soak toes after a tough hike. There are no services within the park so visitors must bring their own water and snacks, and it is a carry in/carry out facility for all trash.

It is important to note that Baxter has instituted a parking reservation system. The park is so popular that the limited parking spaces and narrow roads were causing safety issues and crowding.

A five dollar online reservation will save your spot so check the website to see which area has the best trailhead parking for the hike you wish to try.

Baxter State Park is named after former Maine governor Percival Baxter who, in 1930, acquired land which included Maine’s highest peak, Katahdin. Through additional land purchases and a gift of seven million dollars, the park has grown to encompass over 200,000 acres “for the people of Maine.”

Baxter’s vision in his endowment was to keep the park alive without burden to Maine taxpayers. A true visionary, he organized several entities to oversee and govern the park, including a citizen advisory board to handle stewardship.

Hundreds of miles of trails offer day hikes and backwoods camping experiences and the forty one peaks in the park give ample opportunity for spectacular views. Our trail visit was to Sentinel Mountain, a 6.2 mile roundtrip hike that had us scaling rocks, navigating tree roots, and picking wild blueberries, scavenging for those that the bears may have missed.

Baxter has become an extremely busy place as its popularity grows and people seek out a wilderness experience. In fact, so many through hikers are working their way to Katahdin via the Appalachian Trail that the park has put a limit on the number per day that are permitted in order to keep access fair to everyone.

So, whether you fish, hike, camp or just picnic, Baxter State Park is an incredible gift to all who visit. www.baxterstateparkauthority.com.

Power of Flowers Project seeks new home

By MARY LEACH

TEWKSBURY/WILMINGTON — The Power of Flowers Project has brightened the lives of many seniors in Tewksbury and Wilmington, one flower arrangement at a time. Now the non-profit organization is hoping to find a new home, perhaps in this town.

“Our current landlord in Billerica wants to rent the entire building we are in,” said Joyce Bellefeuille, founder and executive director. “We have been asked to move and need to be in another location by the end of September.”

Bellefeuille, a former marketing professional turned floral designer, established the Power of Flowers Project in 2009 with a small local grant and enormous enthusiasm in 2009. Bellefeuille is one of the many volunteers who run the organization which is staffed with one part-time administrative assistant. The organization takes donations of “used” flowers and repurposes them into arrangements they deliver free to those in nursing homes, assisted living and other places where people need a boost.

Flower arrangements from the Power of Flowers Project have been delivered to many locations in Tewksbury: Bayberry at Emerald Court, Blaire House, Oblate Residence, Peregrine Landing, Tewksbury Hospital and the Tewksbury Senior Center.

Flower arrangements from the Power of Flowers Project have been also delivered to Woodbriar Health Center in Wilmington.

“It is our desire to stay in the area. We have more than 80 volunteers working with us to re-purpose thousands of donated flowers that bring joy and bright moments to hundreds of seniors and others every week,” Bellefeuille said. “My hope is that we can find a non-profit organization or business that has space to share with us. We do have a modest budget and lots of able bodied volunteers to help with the move.”

The organizations is seeking 1,000 to 1,500 square feet, parking, and utilities including a bathroom, for a modest price.

For information, contact Bellefeuille at 978-226-8545 or via email: joyce@powerofflowersproject.org.

Sunnyhurst Ice Cream and our stupid dog Duke

By BRENT CLARK

Brent Clark grew up in Wilmington at 99 Church Street in the '50's and '60's. His mother wrote a column in the Town Crier called "Nosey Nancy." In his most recent essay, he recalls a trip to the old ice cream parlor up the street from where he lived and the annoyances caused by the family dog.

I grew up in the fifties and sixties in a big old house at 99 Church Street in Wilmington. That small town was the whole world to me and I loved it. There were ten kids in my family. I had five brothers and four sisters. I was number four son (as my mother, 'Nosey Nancy,' used to call me in her newspaper column). I was a middle kid and the oldest of the little kids.

Back in those days, one of my older brothers had a dog named Duke. He was a big, white, shorthaired German Shepherd type of dog. Duke was a very protective, aggressive dog. He would often attack and attempt to kill any living creature short of a human kid.

One time I was traveling by the old Brit's Farm up on Main Street on the way to the Town Park. That stupid dog Duke decided to attack one of the Brits' little sheep. Even beating him with a stick would not stop him. Finally, Mr. Brit took a water hose and sprayed him until he stopped and ran away. To this day, I don't know if that little sheep died because Mr. Brit was yelling at me until I fled.

That was just a sample of the craziness you could experience with that dog.

One day we all decided to walk to Sunnyhurst's for an ice-cream. Even though it was several miles away, we were always willing to travel anywhere in town by walking, running, or bicycling. It didn't matter to us how far.

Asking permission went something like this: "Hey Ma! Can we go for a walk up to Sunnyhurst's for an ice-cream?" My mother would look at us and say, "Yes — as long as you're home before the street lights come on. And, keep an eye on the little kids."

It was that simple back then. I could have said something like, "Hey Ma! We want to build a rocket and fly it off the top of the garage to see if we reach Mars. Can we?" And the answer would be the same.

Oh, back to the story. Whenever we went on a trip like this, we definitely did not want to take Duke with us. So, we locked him in the basement and took off.

A left off our back porch brought us to Clark Woods. The woods ran from our house to Adams Street, behind Jeanie Ashworth's house, the Webster's, the Gardner's, and the Gunn's houses.

On the edge of the woods there were a bunch of young maple and oak trees growing. They were about ten to twenty feet tall.

We called them 'hanging trees.' These trees had a tendency to lean out towards the sun over a field. The idea was to climb a tree to the top and throw yourself off as you held on for dear life. The result would be (hopefully) a smooth ride to the ground. Thus, the 'hanging tree' as sometimes you were left hanging.

Next would be the giant pines. If you climbed one to the top, you could see all the way to the roof of the high school over the woods. I often climbed up there to get away from it all. If I was missing back then, someone would come out and yell up the tree for me. I loved it up there.

This day we did not climb any trees because we had a long trip and were all excited.

When we came out of the woods on Adams Street. We were across from the back of the high school (now torn down and replaced). And there was Turtle Pond (now filled in).

Turtle Pond was a pond that was 100 feet across or so. It was perfectly round with old rusty pipes sticking up in the middle. We believed it was manmade. This pond was full of frogs and turtles that we just had to catch. To catch a turtle you need to quietly creep up behind it real slow. Then, quickly grab it.

To catch a frog you need to do the same but when you finally grab you would grab a little ahead as the frog jumped right into your grasp. We just had to stop that day and catch a few. What a blast we had. I can still hear the sound of the bull frogs going burunk, burunk and feel the mud squishing through my fingers as I crouched to catch something.

There was nothing like the sound and smell of the pond in the middle of the summer.

As we came back to turn up Adams Street, guess who showed up? Yup, you guessed it. That stupid dog, Duke.

Somehow he escaped and tracked us all the way. Groans and "Oh, no's" came from all of us.

This dog was a complete pain and could ruin our whole trip.

Finally we decided to go on and walked towards Lowell Street down Adams Street. Some names I remember are the Fentons, Bridges, Battens, Marshes, and the Barons. All from Adams Street.

We had to travel fast past certain homes that had dogs. Otherwise Duke would fight with a bulldog named Cupcake, or another big brown dog named Rusty.

We would run past these houses and yell, "Come on Duke, come on Duke!" to keep him moving and think we would leave him if he stopped.

As we came to the end of Adams Street, on the left was Damie Forrest's place.

He had a big yard that was full of cars. He was always out in the yard working on a car or two. There were some cool hotrods out there. I would find out when I got older that he was the greatest mechanic for miles around.

My oldest brother was a motor head and I am sure he knew Damie.

As the road went to the left we would then go straight into the woods instead of a right on Parker Avenue. And Artie Godzyk's yard. That yard always had interesting machinery in it. We boys loved machinery. Regretfully we intended to travel parallel to Lowell Street in the woods towards Sunnyhurst's, and not past Godzyk's.

The first place we came to was a place we called "The Desert, now a housing development. It was a big open space that was all sand. The Desert was surrounded by giant, tall, blueberry bushes that happened to be plentiful and ripe. Immediately we ran over and started picking. The branches were so high that a kid had to climb in and climb on a branch and force it down. Then you could hook the branch under your armpit and pick and eat, pick and eat.

Oh my goodness. The excitement at such a feast was accompanied with exclamations like "Mmmm," and "What a good spot!"

The blueberries were as big as a dime and so delicious.

Then my older brothers knew the rest of the way. Behind so many houses and turn to the right on a path towards Lowell Street to Sunnyhurst Ice Cream across from Avco.

What a feeling of contentment as we filled our bellies one more time with an ice cream in a sugar cone with jimmies.

Sunnyhurst's had the best Ice cream around. A close second was Tattersal's at the lake and Woodside's soda fountain in the center had good ice cream too.

What happened on the way home scared the heck out of me. Of course it involved Duke. All of us were laughing and carrying on and having a good old time on our way back home. When we were about half way back to the desert, we heard Duke barking off in the distance. We ran to see what he was up to now!

As we came out of the woods, there was Duke in someone's fenced in pasture, chasing and harassing a horse. Not only that, but there was a farmer looking guy chasing across the pasture towards the dog and us. He had a shotgun in his arms as he yelled "Get the hell outta here!"

Over and over he yelled as he ran. We took off as Duke passed us and the guy let off a shot. I don't think it was aimed at us but it totally scared us as we ran as fast as we could. The bang was so loud that I thought I was dead. I jumped so high as I ran that I swear my feet didn't touch the ground for a few paces.

We ran and ran when suddenly we began to laugh as we realized that no one was hurt and we were safe. We laughed and laughed the way you do when you are so nervous that you can't stop.

I don't remember the rest of the trip, but, I'm pretty sure we didn't stop for any more blueberries on the way home.

Just another summer day, full of excitement back in the good old days!

repair, multiple jaw extractions, any corrective plastic surgeries he may want and any unexpected surgeries that we may need."

"I know it sounds funny, but my biggest fear is for his teeth," said Curcio, Jace's "Nonna," owner of Salon 62 and a special needs bus driver in Wilmington. "When Jace is older, he'll need care for his teeth, likely dental implants, and that care isn't paid for by insurance."

The money raised at the tournament will go into a trust that can also be used for replacement hearing aids and any of the other items that are not immediately covered by insurance. Funds from this established trust have paid for a special float that allows Jace to go in the water without fear of the water getting into his trach which he uses to breathe through his neck.

While Jace looks different than most other boys, he shares the same interests. He loves football, whether playing or watching his beloved New England Patriots, playing Wii with his cousin Madison, or roughhousing with his older brother, Ty.

His family describes him as an ordinary second grader who is good natured, well liked and has no problem with looking different than his peers.

"Jace is popular — the whole school knows him," said ten-year-old cousin Madison Curcio. "That makes me and Ty popular, too."

"Jace is a typical eight-year-old boy, filled with energy and enthusiasm for life," Murphy said. "He loves to make new friends, learn new things, and explore new surroundings. He also enjoys spending time with all the people he loves. He enjoys helping to care for his little sister, Celia, and spending time with his big brother, Ty. He has a beautiful spirit and an old soul that draws in so many people. I'm very blessed to call him mine."

The seed for the idea to have a Cornhole Tournament fundraiser was planted by Cathy Ober, a volunteer at the Wilmington Farmers Market who reached out to Christine Canevari, also of Wilmington. Canevari has organized tournaments in the past and did not hesitate to help plan this one. Michael Labrecque of Wilmington designed a special Batman-theme cornhole board once he learned that Batman is Jace's favorite superhero. These boards will be available to buy at the tournament. Baskets and other items will also be raffled off. Wilmington country western singer April Renzella heard about the event and volunteered to perform. The goodwill continued to spread and more people got involved.

"It was amazing how everything came together so quickly and how so many people want to help — I just love this town," Curcio said, adding that she had either lived or worked in Wilmington her entire life.

The Cornhole Tournament is open to all teams and players on a space-available basis. There is no minimum age to play. The tournament costs $25 per person to enter, of which $20 goes directly to the fund. Payments must be made in cash or by check payable to "Jace Murphy Trust" the morning of the tournament. Teams and individuals are required to check in between 9:45 and 10:15 a.m. Walk-up registrations will also be accepted as long as space is available. The tournament will begin precisely at 10:30 a.m. For more information about the tournament, visit near South and Main streets about 6:30 p.m., but the suspect then disappeared into a wooded area, according to police-radio broadcasts. It was also reported that he was seen on a bicycle.

Efforts continued until the next morning, when the local police captured the suspect.

On Wednesday afternoon the Wilmington Police Department released a statement on the situation.

"On Tuesday evening, August 23, 2016, at approximately 5:00 p.m. the Wilmington

Public Safety center received a call from Sirius XM security who were actively tracking a 2014 Hyundai Tucson SUV that had been reported stolen out of Boston. Officers of the Wilmington Police Department were able to locate this vehicle parked on New Hampshire Road. When officers approached, the vehicle sped off, striking the front end of a Wilmington cruiser and then fled a short distance before crashing in the backyard of an Aspen Drive residence.

"The operator fled and an area search was conducted in the vicinity of Nichols Street in Wilmington and South Street in Tewksbury with the assistance of Tewksbury and Billerica police as well as the State Police and the State Police Airwing. The suspect eluded police until Wednesday morning when the suspect was spotted off of Salem Street in Tewksbury.

"The suspect again fled from police and an area search was again conducted by Tewksbury Police and their K-9 unit with assistance from Wilmington Police, Billerica Police K-9 units and the Mass State Police Airwing. The suspect was observed and

Maguire was living in Wilmington at time of his death Hearing scheduled for last suspect in Maguire murder case

By PATRICK BLAIS
Times Chronicle

WOBURN/WILMINGTON - The sole defendant to be convicted in the John J. Maguire murder case will appear in court next month for yet another pretrial hearing.

According to Meghan Kelly, a spokeswoman for Middlesex District Attorney Marian Ryan, defense lawyers for Newburyport's Arthur Cinelli, who remains in federal custody in New York, are expected to appear in Middlesex Superior Court on Sept. 14 for a pretrial conference.

The court date will fall just about three months before the family and friends of the slain Woburn police officer mark the sixth year since the father-of-three's murder at the hands of the Newburyport man's brother, Domenic Cinelli, during a botched jewelry heist at Kohl's department store on Dec. 26, 2010.

It's unclear whether Cinelli, who is serving time in a federal prison for an unrelated drug conviction, will be present for the hearing next month. Since being held in federal custody, Cinelli has only appeared at court hearings that deal with evidentiary motions.

Last year, Ryan personally appeared at the prosecutor's table in the North Woburn courthouse as Wakefield's Scott Hanright, another alleged co-conspirator in the foiled Kohl's robbery, pled guilty to 22 criminal counts for his role as a lookout during the holdup.

Hanright, whose plea bargain included an admission of guilt for second-degree murder, was subsequently sentenced to life in prison with eligibility for parole in 25 years.

A day later, the third surviving suspect, Wakefield's Kevin Dingwell, also accepted a plea deal, in which he admitted the DA's office had sufficient evidence to convict him of misleading authorities about Hanright's whereabouts during the chaotic investigation in the immediate wake of Maguire's murder.

When the two other suspects changed their pleas last year, there was some speculation that Cinelli would follow suit, especially since his alleged co-conspirators would likely be called as witnesses against him in any subsequent trial.

However, the career criminal has continued to contest the charges that he helped his younger brother plot the Kohl's heist, which authorities say was intentionally pulled off during the height of a blizzard the day after Christmas, when the younger Cinelli believed police response would be delayed.

Domenic Cinelli died in an exchange of gunfire with Maguire as he tried to escape the department store with $100,000 worth of jewelry from the East Woburn business.

Authorities say Maguire, having already been mortally wounded by Domenic Cinelli, heroically squeezed off a round from his service revolver — the first time he ever discharged his weapon while on-duty in his 34-year career — and downed the career felon before he could escape.

Cinelli was reportedly trying to flee to a getaway car parked on Richard Circle, which is situated amidst a quiet residential neighborhood by the Reading line.

Authorities say when the elder brother learned the hold-up had gone horribly wrong, he contacted a defense attorney, who subsequently agreed to safeguard the cell-phone reportedly used to consult his sibling about pulling off the robbery.

A few months later, federal authorities formally alleged that the elder Cinelli, who was at home recuperating from surgery during the night of the blizzard, had given his younger sibling advice about the heist.

According to the district attorney, before going to trial in the Maguire murder case, she plans to first prosecute the Newburyport man for joining his brother in another armed robbery at Stoneham's Stop & Shop about a month before the Kohl's heist.

In June of 2010, some five months after Cinelli's arrest for conspiring with his younger brother in the Kohl's robbery, the DA's office announced the then 50-year-old had been indicted for holding up Stoneham's Stop & Shop just six weeks before Maguire was murdered.

Investigators say the elder Cinelli, who a month later would undergo hip surgery, is clearly seen on Stop & Shop surveillance video limping to the store entrance, where he purportedly stood as his younger brother waved a gun at the store manager and employees inside the business.

Domenic Cinelli then forced the manager to unlock the safe, while employees were instructed to empty its contents.

Authorities say in the hours before the supermarket robbery, Arthur Cinelli's phone was recorded pinging off of various cell-phone towers as he traveled from Ware, N.H. to the vicinity of I-93's exit onto Montvale Avenue.

library history — from the late Johnson's estate.

Raised in Wilmington, Johnson relocated to Portola Valley, Calif., in 1960, where she died in January 2015 at the age of 96. According to her obituary on legacy.com, Johnson grew up in Wilmington on Burlington Avenue, the daughters of Alfred and Alice Allen. Mr. Allen served on the Wilmington School Committee about 1930, and was town treasurer in the early 1940s.

Johnson went to Simmons College in Boston, which is best known for its library science program. While at Simmons, she met her husband, Bill, who was attending Harvard University. They married and moved to Wisconsin and then to Stanford, where Bill taught organic chemistry.

"They made Portola Valley their home in 1960, but her heart never completely left Wilmington, Mass.," the obituary read.

"We were shocked and delighted to learn the news," said Tina Stewart, library director. "Her sister Frankline Allen was a trustee of the library from 1945 to 1965. Frankline had left a gift to the library when she died and her sister had matched it. We learned after Ms. Johnson passed away that there would be a donation, but we didn't have any idea it would be so much."

The late Allen was a leader in the effort to build a new library. Until 1969, the library was housed in a former one-room schoolhouse, which is now the Fourth of July Building at Wilmington Common. While the library was quaint, it was not at all adequate for the needs of the town. Now her sister's gift could be used to help in a future library transformation.

The Board of Library Trustees will determine how gift is used. "I believe they will concur with my recommendation that the funds be set aside to be used for a major library improvement and not be spent on operating expenses," she said. "A donation of this size could at some point help with giving Wilmington a 21st century library facility."

Stewart said she has often heard stories of gifts out of the blue and thought, "wouldn't it be nice if it happened to Wilmington?"

"We are very grateful for this generous gift and that this donation will be used for a significant library improvement that will directly benefit the community. It's a wonderful legacy," she said.

Inagural Women's Softball League a big hit in Wilmington

By BRENDAN FOLEY
Sports Correspondent

brendanmfoley@outlook.com
WILMINGTON - Throughout the summer, the Wilmington Women's Softball League have carved time out of their busy days and braved the scorching heat in order to go down to Aprile Field each Sunday and enjoy some softball.

In their final evening of play in the summer season, enthusiasm remained high for just about every player down at the field. Errors were laughed off, big plays were cheered, and if one team lacked enough players for a full field, ladies from other squads jumped in with no hesitation.

"The summer with this league has gone fantastic," said Rick Hill, one of the organizers for the league. "I think this is something that is going to be built upon. There's probably going to be even more interest next year."

Hill expects the league to benefit from the renovations coming to Aprile Field in the immediate future. Everything from new fences, to new dugouts, to added sod for the outfield, all are expected to transform Aprile Field into a fresher place to play.

Just in its first year, the league attracted an incredible amount of early attention and excitement. League founders like Jen Mason had been campaigning to develop a league through social media like Facebook, gathering hundreds of interested parties. When the group held an open house for the nascent league in the spring, over 70 people showed up.

That excitement has lasted for the entirety of the summer, with many of the ladies heading out or leaving their last game of the season wearing big smiles.

"I played in high school and college, and I heard about the league and thought it would be fun to be out here with the other women," said Alexis Mastronardi. "It's just having fun on Sundays. It's been great."

"I played many years ago and hadn't played in a really long time, so I was really excited to play again," said Heather Glazer. "It's been so much fun. It was tough at first because I was really, really rusty, but it's been awesome."

Christine Voner, Christine Burke, and Monica Archer, all members of the Glory Daze team, echoed these sentiments.

"We get to make new friends and play a sport that I haven't played in a long time," Voner said.

"It's competitive, but it's fun," Archer agreed.

The league will now take a brief hiatus and reconvene in a few weeks for a fall season. With the Aprile Field undergoing renovations, Hill is still working with the school department to identify a replacement, but he expects they will get that resolved in the near future.

Oberg lands on disabled list with arm injury

By JAMIE POTE
Sports Editor

jamiepote@hotmail.com
MILWAUKEE - Former Tewksbury Memorial High School star pitcher Scott Oberg, now in his second season in the major leagues with the Colorado Rockies, landed on the 15-day disabled list on Monday after being diagnosed with blood clots in his right arm.

According to Rick Braun of the Denver Post, the Rockies doctors diagnosed Oberg with "axillary artery thrombosis" and luckily this rare condition was discovered quickly.

He went for some tests (on Sunday) that showed some clots," Rockies' manager Walt Weiss said to Braun. "It's a scary situation anytime you're talking about blood clots. It's a good thing we got on it early. It was scary news when we got that, but I think they're taking care of it as we speak and he's going to be OK. But it's tough news for Scottie."

Although it's too soon to make a prognosis, Oberg is almost certainly done for the season, added the Post.

"There was some tightness in his arm so I stayed off him for a day or two," Weiss said. "When it lingered, he went and got some tests done."

Oberg posted a 1-1 record with one save and a 5.19 ERA in 24 appearances over three stints with the Rockies this season.

This is the first time in his two seasons landing on the DL, however, Oberg certainly has dealt with several previous injuries. In 2010 he was diagnosed with Psoriatic Arthritis and was forced to walk with a cane for a month before medication cured the problem.

Then he missed all of the 2011 season when he had Tommy John surgery. But he came back very strong to finish with that superb season in 2012 and then was drafted by the Rockies that June in the 15th round.

Gorski finishes with impressive place and time at Falmouth Race

By MIKE IPPOLITO
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com
Brittany Gorski has competed in plenty of races in her young life, be it competing in the mile run and 800 meters in high school and college or the numerous 5K races she has competed in since her college graduation. Gorski is no stranger to toeing the starting line and competing in front of large crowds.

The 26-year old lifelong Tewksbury resident is a young athlete who clearly loves to compete in any race, but there is one race that stands out above all others for her: the iconic Falmouth Road Race, which she competed in this past weekend, taking part in the 44th Annual running of the great event.

It was Gorski's third time running the beautiful seven mile course from Woods Hole to Falmouth, and as she has in each of her appearances, she did very for herself, finishing 631st overall in a field of nearly 11,000 runners in a time of 52:18.

"There's nothing like (Falmouth)," Gorski said. "The course is beautiful, and the crowds are amazing. Your name is on your bib (number), so everybody is shouting at you as if they are your family. You are running along the beaches and the scenery is beautiful. It is just a great experience."

Also making it a great experience for Gorski was her outstanding finish, which she has produced in each of her three appearances. While her time of 52:18 wasn't quite as good as last year's 48:19, she still had a great day, finishing 137th out of 5,757 female runners. Despite her great performance, Gorski had hoped to do even better, but she is also pursuing an even greater goal down the road, which may have contributed to her slightly slower time.

"It wasn't my best day. I am training for a marathon, so my time was a little slower than I am used to, because I have been training at a pace of about 7:30 per mile to get ready for that," Gorski said. "I still felt like I did really well, though. That's what brings you back every year. You always want to do better."

As Gorski said, she is preparing for her first marathon, the Lehigh Valley Marathon in Pennsylvania on September 11th. As experienced as she is in road racing, the marathon represents a big step up from her normal racing distances; the longest of which was the recent ten mile Yankee Homecoming in Newburyport.

"I am a little nervous because I have never run anything that long," Gorski said. "But I am also very excited for it. I am trying to qualify for next year's Boston Marathon and I am determined to do it."

If history is any indication, when Gorski sets her mind to something it is best not to bet against her. After graduating from Central Catholic in 2009, she moved on to Holy Cross where in 2013 she was the 800-meter champion during the indoor season in a school record time of 2:10.65.

She continued her running career after graduation, running with friends from college, as well as her boyfriend Nate Webber of Atkinson, NH, who finished 83rd overall in Falmouth in a time of 41:14. The young runner is far from finished in her racing career, and Falmouth will undoubtedly be a big part of that racing future.

"Aside from the challenge of always wanting a better time, it is things like the crowd and the course that keep me coming back. The crowd definitely helps get you through those seven miles," Gorski said. "I will definitely be back next year, barring any setback with not getting picked in the lottery. I will keep running it as long as I get in."

Wilmington 12-year-old baseball team competes at Cooperstown Tournament

By MIKE IPPOLITO
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com
Students in Wilmington will be returning to school in the next week or so, and upon their return, undoubtedly many of them will be asked, "What did you do on your summer vacation?" There will of course be some great stories about family vacations and time spent with friends by the pool, but it will be hard to top the summer vacation tales of a select group of 12-year old Wilmington Little Leaguers who recently had the experience of a lifetime, participating in the Cooperstown Dream Park Baseball Tournament at the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, New York.

The group of talented ball players was the first ever 12-year old team to participate in the tournament in Cooperstown, and they were kept quite busy during their time in the historic city, playing in six games over a three day stretch in the preliminary round of the tournament before playing two more games in the playoffs, winning their first round game before being eliminated in the second round.

Of course they also managed to find some time to visit the legendary National Baseball Hall of Fame while they were in Cooperstown, and several members of the team continued their journey after the tournament was over, traveling to Williamsport, Pennsylvania to take in several games of the Little League World Series.

The Wildcats went 1-5 during the preliminary round playing against some incredibly talented teams from all over the country, facing squads from traditional baseball powerhouses like North Carolina and California, among others.

But more than wins and losses, Wildcats coach Derek Santini says his team enjoyed experiences together that will last a lifetime.

"It was an amazing experience for everyone involved," Santini said. "I think they learned about not only what kind of players they can be, but they learned some valuable life lessons on and off the field."

And while the Wildcats record might not have been exactly what they would have wanted, Santini and his fellow coaches Pat Toomey and Gary Moretto could not have been prouder of the way the boys played against some opposing teams that were stacked with talent.

"We were playing against teams that were hand picked for the best players and even against some regional teams," Santini said. "We were definitely at a distinct disadvantage, but I thought the kids competed very well. It was very impressive. I was very proud of the way the boys played and with the way they carried themselves."

While many of the teams were, as Santini said, basically All-Star teams made up of the best players from several cities, the Wildcats were simply a group of hard working, scrappy little leaguers from Wilmington. Don't misunderstand, the Wildcats had some incredibly talented ball players, but they were a team made up of 12 little leaguers from a small town in Massachusetts going against regional teams from North Carolina, California, New York and Maryland.

The Wildcats talented roster included Liam Dwyer, Joey Dynan, Adam LeBlanc, Tommy Mallinson, Devon McLaughlin, Garrett Moretto, Luke Murphy, Nate Packer, Colin Sainato, Ryan Santini, Timmy McCarthy and Jack Toomey. Joey Dynan was unable to play for the Wildcats due to injury, having fractured his hip two weeks before the trip, but despite the painful injury, the tough minded 12-year-old still made the trip

A team of 12-year-old baseball players from Wilmington played in a tournament held at Cooperstown New York. to Cooperstown and helped out in other ways.

"He is just a fantastic kid," Santini said of Dynan. "He was one of our best fund raisers for the trip and is an excellent player as well, so I know it was tough on him not to be able to really play. But he was a huge help to us as a coach, and in a couple of the games where we were getting blown out, he was able to bat. He still can't run, but he was at least able to bat, which was nice to see."

It wasn't just Dynan who impressed Santini and the other coaches however, as the entire roster did themselves and the town of Wilmington proud, according to Santini.

"For a lot of these teams, this tournament is just one stop along the way through a whole summer of tournaments and they have been playing together forever," Santini said. "For us, it was really a blessing to even get there, let alone beat some of these teams."

But beat some of those teams they did. In the preliminary round, the Wildcats picked up their lone victory over the West Bay Patriots of Rhode Island, belting their way to a 20-10 victory on Sunday, August 14.

Earlier in the tournament they had nearly pulled off a shocker, dropping a hard fought 3-2 decision to the Potter Pirates Black of Maryland.

The Wildcats then moved on to the single elimination tournament where they got the tournament off to a great start with a thrilling, come from behind 9-8 victory over the Las Legends of Nevada, on Wednesday, August 17.

The Wildcats fought back from an early 6-0 deficit to pull out the victory and move on to the second round.

"The boys were extremely excited to get that win," Santini said. "I was very proud of them. It was tough being down that big early in the game against a very talented team, but the boys pulled together and came back to win the game. I couldn't have been happier for them."

The Wildcats were eliminated later in the day with a loss to the Texas Bombers, but as the boys walked off the field for the final time, the disappointment of losing could not diminish the incredible experience they had shared together.

"It was a beautiful experience," Santini said. "You really got to learn what you can really become as a baseball player by watching some of these teams. That, along with just the experience of traveling together and fund raising together before the trip was very special for all of us. We will never forget it."

Sessa Sisters finish first and third at Elite High School Road Race

By JAMIE POTE
Sports Editor

jamiapote@hotmail.com
FALMOUTH - On Sunday, sisters Rachel and Emily Sessa finished first and third respectively at the Falmouth Road Race, known as the Tommy Cochary Elite High School Mile event.

Nine high school athletes participated in this race and Rachel, who will be a junior, won the race with a time of 5:03. Emily, who will be a senior, was third at 5:10.

It was a great, family environment, with lots of sponsors and free stuff," said TMHS cross-country and track coach Peter Molloy, who was a spectator with his wife and children. "There were kids races, the high school mile, and men's and women's elite mile races as well."

Both sisters are coming off tremendous indoor and outdoor track seasons, and that came after helping the soccer team reach the state tournament last fall. They both have decided to forgo soccer this fall and will be members of the cross-country team at TMHS. This event certainly will help them gain some of that experience.

"What I'm most proud of is the way Emily and Rachel managed the weekend," said Molloy. "They went down to have fun and experience something cool. It was apparent by they interacted with the other high school athletes that they weren't concerned with winning. They were relaxed, silly, joking around and they really enjoyed themselves. They didn't do any specific workouts for the race. They kept to their cross-country training and they trusted their fitness. And boy are they fit."

Molloy said that Rachel took the lead around the 800-meter mark and never relinquished it. She finished at 5:03 which was three seconds better than Natick's Grace Connolly, who finished second at 5:06.14.

"You could tell Rachel was confident in her fitness, the distance of the race, and her past success. It was pretty clear at the half way mark she knew she could win and boy did she go after it," said Molloy.

Emily was third with a very impressive 5:10.15 time. She finished ahead of several well-known local runners including Margot Ehrental of Concord-Carlisle and the Roffman sisters, Sarah and Kaitlin of Littleton.

"Emily hung back a bit longer and started making her move with about 300 meters left," said Molloy. "She jumped from sixth to third in that last 300 meters. You could tell she wanted something different from the race than her sister - Emily just wanted to make the podium. This makes complete sense, as her primary event has been the half mile. This was new territory for her and I thought she did a great job managing her efforts in the race. For the two of them to come home with a medal is the icing on the cake."

Molloy added that the sisters were able to meet the American Record holder in the mile and the fourth ever high school athlete to break four minutes in the mile, Alan Webb.

As a kick off for the Wilmington youth soccer season, the girls grade 7-2 team, long with Coach Jack Buckley and assistant coach Tom Watson, thought it would be nice to show some appreciation and personally thank the Wilmington Police and Fire Departments for their tireless and selfless work at keeping our town safe. The girls brought baked goods and wrote personal notes of appreciation.
